

Project Origin

It is inevitable that Taiwan is marching toward an aging society. Creating a sustainable future care system is what we are considering. Since in Japan and in Europe the idea of an individual, community and small-scale care is being promoted, we realize that providing care for people living in remote areas requires not only an infrastructure, but utilize local human resources. Thus, we put emphasis on the improvement of care quality and personnel trainings. “Let us take care of our own elders” is our mission. We aim for cultivating excellent care givers, supporting and teaching family care givers to give the elderly a friendly, amicable environment for their later years. Our hope lies not only in taking care of those in distant areas who need healthcare, but also for those who are economically disadvantaged to learn a skill, so as to care for the elderly of their communities. In view of this, we plan to construct a Long-term Care Instructional Building at Puli, for that medical treatment lies not just in medical treatment, but it generates a popularized, localized healthcare for the local people.

In order to fundraise the construction the Long-term Care Education Building, the fee is estimated to be twenty hundred millions NT dollars. We had raised fifty millions NT dollars, but one-hundred fifty millions NT dollars is still needed. In this way, the project is created to collect public donations, so as to develop a comprehensive and integrated healthcare service and to satisfy families and healthcare personnel, carrying out the idea of a family-like living and care environment.
