

Mr. X: An Eligible Bachelor

A 58-year-old recycling volunteer, Mr. X's family has all died, having no relatives and friends. Living in a shabby old little house with piles of canned food and rotten vegetables, he insists that all those food are still edible. Mr. X lives with a small sum of subsidy each month, and relies on materials given from charities. However, he is an amiable and thrifty figure who participates actively in community activities with his small motorcycle.

Mr. X has been receiving PCH's help for more than one year. Our social workers have been assisting in washing clothes and improving his living environment. Mr. X has a good interaction with our social workers, for when he is sick, he will call us when he is hospitalized and discharged.
